Pre-Health Professions

Are you interested in a career in medicine or another health profession? If you answered yes, then you just made your first step on a career path that is full of opportunities.

At King's, students who concentrate their studies in any of the subdisciplines of our pre-health program will gain excellent preparation in order to continue their education in medical school or professional programs in chiropractic, dentistry, optometry, pharmacy or veterinary medicine.

Pre-health at King's

At King's, we have developed an academic and career preparation program specifically for pre-health students. In this program you will be advised as to which courses, internships, job shadowing experiences and types of service learning activities will develop you into a well-rounded individual—something that will set you apart from your peers when you dive into the very competitive pool of professional school applicants.

Most pre-health students major in biology, however there are numerous science based majors you can choose from including general science, chemistry, neuroscience and psychology. Whatever your career interests, you can be assured that King's will provide you with the solid scientific background that you will need to excel on your professional school entrance exams and in your graduate studies.

Real world preparation

One of the best ways a student can prepare for a career in health care is to experience it first-hand. Through our job shadowing and internship programs, our students discover their strengths and can confidently choose which area of medicine is for them. Just a few of the institutions where our students have interned include:

- Yale University School of Medicine
- Columbia University Center for Neurobiology and Behavior
- The National Institutes of Health
- The Institute for Genomic Research
- The Philadelphia Zoo
- The Department of Environmental Protection
