

ETHICS

MINOR CONCENTRATION

A minor concentration in Ethics requires six courses, representing eighteen credits. The minor in Ethics provides King's students increased opportunities to examine moral questions arising in public and professional life. All students are welcome to pursue this minor, but those who intend careers in business, government, journalism, law, and medicine should be especially interested. Courses in the minor are designed to give students a solid background in the literature of moral philosophy and moral theology as well as opportunities to study contemporary moral questions.

Note: The Philosophy Department commonly cross-lists 100-level and 300-level courses. To satisfy the requirements of the Ethics Minor, a student must take at least one 300-level Philosophy course, either PHIL 383 or one of the other 300-level courses in the Elective Courses list. Finally, the courses in the Ethics Minor may be taken in any order, though the capstone course should generally be taken near the end of a student's academic career at King's.

Minor Requirements (6 courses – 18 credits)	Credits
THEO 160 Christian Ethics / HNRS 260 The Christian Moral Tradition	3
PHIL 173 Ethics and the Good Life (Cross Listed as PHIL 383)	3
PHIL 470 Seminar in Moral Philosophy OR THEO 470/471/472 Seminar in Moral Theology	3
Nine (9) credits of THEO/PHIL electives (THEO 163-169) (PHIL 172, 174-177) (MSB 287)	9
Three (3) courses in total of electives listed above

For more information regarding the Ethics minor including but not limited to course descriptions and department chairpersons, please visit the online college course catalog.