

The School of Health Sciences at King's College in Wilkes-Barre, PA is seeking an individual to serve as faculty in the newly formed Master of Science in Nutrition Science program. This appointment is for a full-time, 12-month non-tenure track position, starting in August 2020. Rank and position type commensurate with individual experience. The successful candidate will have the ability to teach graduate entry-level nutrition and nutrition-related classes in an online format.

The teaching load for this position is 30 credits per academic year, including accelerated graduate-level courses in the Fall, Spring, and Summer semesters.

Candidates must have a graduate degree (Doctorate preferred) in Nutrition or Dietetics. Licensure (RDN) or certification (CNS) is preferred.

The ideal candidate will have strong evidence of excellence in teaching at the graduate and/or undergraduate level and the ability to work in partnership with department chairs and program directors in continually developing the nutrition curriculum to meet the needs of our students, as well as comply with accreditation standards that lead to CNS eligibility according to the American Nutrition Association. Online teaching experience is preferred. Further, faculty will be required to engage in service, scholarship and professional development according to the standards proportionate to rank and position type.

For confidential consideration, please submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, and names and contact information of three professional references by email to hrjobs@kings.edu. Screening of applications will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled.
